Uncensored Version of 9-11 Report Detailing Spy Ring Now Available

By Michael Collins Piper

AFP presents — for the first time ever — an unredacted, uncensored reprint of the controversial report leaked from inside the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) exposing a wide-ranging Israeli spy ring operating on American soil prior to the 9-11 "terrorist" tragedy.

Previous editions of the report released by AFP and circulated by others on the Internet were redacted — that is, portions were "blacked out." But those redactions aren't in this one. All the facts are there for you to see. Here's the story:

Due to an unexpected computer "miracle," when AFP ran out of copies and sent the report back to the printer, a "techie" at the printing company discovered that the scanning process removed all of the redactions. So AFP said, "do it" and the redactions were excised and now you can read the previously suppressed information.

The wide array of evidence presented in this report confirms the fact — still unknown to the public at large — that Israeli intelligence operatives in the United States (posing as "art students") were engaged in nationwide spying on government facilities and other institutions in the period preceding the 9-11 attacks.

But what makes the report most explosive is that the report demonstrates that these Israelis were surveilling the alleged 9-11 hijackers prior to those attacks.

And while there are some who doubt the alleged identities of the 19 individuals officially named as the hijackers, there is no question that the Israeli operatives were on top of persons whose names have been linked to 9-11 by the U.S. government version of events.

The story of the "art students" has become almost legendary among serious independent investigators of 9-11, despite the fact the U.S. government and the mass media have done their utmost to keep it under wraps. At one point, spokesmen for then-Attorney General John Ashcroft — a fanatic supporter of Israel — even claimed the story was "an urban myth," and that there were no such "art students."

In fact — although this is not mentioned in the report — some of those "art students" visited the headquarters of the newspaper, The Spotlight, whose editors launched AFP upon The Spotlight's demise in 2001. Arriving without notice, they offered to sell artwork at discount prices that they said had been intended for delivery "at the bank across the street" but the bank had rejected it.

While in The Spotlight office they were full of questions and obviously very alert to the activities therein, causing one "conspiracy theorist" on The Spotlight staff — this author, in fact — to suspect these students were Israeli agents on a training mission.

It was only later it was learned that these same "art students" and their colleagues were indeed Israeli agents — thanks to the patriot inside the DEA who released the report that AFP is now making available once again.
